Ali G Indahouse is a 2002 British comedy film written by Sacha Baron Cohen and Dan Mazer, directed by Mark Mylod, and starring Baron Cohen as Ali G, a British rapper-turned-government official and interviewer. It was filmed in England and Kenya, and was released in the United States on April 19, 2002. It was the first feature-length film to bear the Ali G name. The film follows Ali G and his exploits in his career as a government official, interviewer, and part-time rapper, and ends with his nomination and election to represent London in the European Parliament. “Ali G Indahouse” star Sacha Baron Cohen went on to become the film's co-writer, director, lead actor and producer, as well as the creator, writer and star of the equally successful Da Ali G Show on HBO. Sacha Baron Cohen has been putting an emphasis on the dark side of the stoner culture in his recent work. From his hilarious feature film “The Dictator” to his attempts at matching Al Gore for the most obscene interview, Baron Cohen has proved his comedic talents. Now, he will try to defend it all with another outrageous role, that of Sir Leslie Jones. Jones is a British rapper who has been called “the Queen of rap” and “the most disgusting human being on the planet.” She has participated in the World War 3 documentary and her album “Da Ali G Show Presents... I'm Straight Outta London” debuted at number 2 on the Billboard Top 200, where it stayed for 2 weeks. Jones has also been featured on the Simpsons and Saturday Night Live. She will be joined by Sasha Baron Cohen as Leslie's long lost little brother, Al.
