A: The reason is that you're iterating through a single item in your list and then appending the values from each of them to your string. It should be `soma=open('a.txt','r')` for line in soma:
`line=line.split(' ') soma=soma+line+\` #You are appending every line with the new value to your string, appending will repeat the last item found.
`soma=soma+line+\` #This should be your add to string This will convert the whole file to a single string. Q: What does the term "manosphere" signify? What do we mean when we use the term manosphere? It's not an area of study for the expansion of the circle of the manosphere? It refers to a place? Does it describe certain types of people, like a subset of the feminist echo chamber? Or is it just an umbrella term for a bunch of different people? Some examples of the term: "You barely listen to women in the manosphere" "The manosphere is a bunch of white men" "The manosphere is for sociopaths" "The manosphere thinks that women should be property" A: The term "manosphere" does not refer to any one thing in particular. It refers to a cluster of ideas, concepts, and people who identify with them, including but not limited to: Blacks on the whole are more violent than whites, and to some degree this is because the same white people who want to claim Black lives are mostly the same white people who want to perform forcible sexual relations on Black men. It's important to note that the difference is not necessarily all male on male violence, but generally more males will engage in a certain behavior on a certain type of person than on someone else, or on themselves. Blacks are disproportionately violent, and in the manosphere they are often referred to as the "black social justice warrior", using the same excuse that "the LGBT people are working to make sure [you] don't get laid". The above is assumed and may or may not be true but a lot of the popular

A stepwise progression of dysplasia of the dental papilla. Dental papilla has multilayered architecture with properties of soft tissues and hard tissues. The epithelial cells from the dental papilla have been reported to have a great deal of plasticity and possess the potential to differentiate into a variety of tissues. The papilla might be the most important area for regenerating different types of teeth.

However, little is known about the underlying molecular and cellular mechanisms of dental papilla development. In this study, the expression of ALK5/TGF- $\beta$ , -1/Smad3 and -2/Smad4 signaling molecules was investigated in the oral mucosa of rat in the process of dental papilla development.

The cross-sectional analysis suggested that ALK5/TGF- $\beta$  and -1/Smad3 signaling pathway expression was concentrated in the palatal papilla while -2/Sm
