In this combat game the player is placed inside a tank. They can join up to 2 additional friends and all players need to coordinate to drive the tank together. No rolling around in the tank and nothing like that. No, you need to coordinate and work together with your teammates. Because this game is built around VR a good communication system is required. There is a commander and a driver for each tank. The commander can see the map and can target specific capture points on the map. However the commander cannot see the actual Tank Units but they can see the position of each tank on the map. They also have the map zoomed in close so they can see the details of the map and not just the overall locations. All tanks have the same equipment: RPG - This is the primary weapon for the gunner. It has a good rate of fire but the damage is not as great as a tank shell which is needed to disable tanks. -Coaxial machine gun -The coaxial machine gun is a secondary weapon for the gunner. You can use it to help cover the gunner while they're aiming at the enemy or to destroy tanks at long range. -Periscope -The gunner has a periscope to help them aim at enemies. It will retract when they're not using it. -Battlefield sight -The Gunner has a BF sight on their periscope. The BF sight is great for targeting distant enemies or spotting the commander's tank. It has a red crosshair that can be enabled at any time. -Monocular -The driver has a monocular that will zoom in and out to help them spot the enemies. -Monopole -The driver also has a monopole that they can use to move the tank around. They can use it to move towards capture points or to move away from danger. If used near capture points it will unlock the capture point while you're driving. This is very useful and when used in the right place you can complete the game with only 1 capture point left. -Gearbox -All tanks have a gearbox that is used to drive the tank around. When you use a certain amount of your kinetic energy and your gears match up your tank will start to move forward. -Fuel -If you have a tank with the right gear you will have fuel available for the tank to move. The bigger the tank the more fuel there is. -Hatch -The

The game is divided into two screens. One will be a big map for you and your team. The other one will be the in game battle screen. On the battle screen there are four different modes to play. The Standard Game - Teams battle each other individually against the AI in battle to take control of a control point. Capture the flag is often used in these battles. Forts - In this mode the teams battle to capture and hold forts to win the round. In this mode there is a larger map for each team and around every fort there is a wall to defend. The objective is to capture as many forts as possible and hold them for as long as possible. The in game chat is fully voice operated. You can use your voice to say what you are looking for or other commands. When the battle is over the commander in each team has access to the post battle screen. The commander can send reports for each team to the team leaders. When all reports have been sent the battle is considered over. Players will be able to enter their names into the leaderboards. Statistics like, best kills, best assists, total points, best / worst positions are tracked. On our website there is a quick button to open the battle screen when needed. This will also allow you to switch between teams. The leaderboard is open. Players on other team can be used to counter you and they can tag and report you to show your status in the leaderboard. Like in all our games there is a real-time voice chat. It's on your decision whether you want to use it, however you can always mute it. In these maps you can also see (for the first time in Steel Crew) how many people are in the total player count. This will also be used to show your stats. You can use a keybind (pictured below) to cycle between views with that key. You can also set an angle from which you want to look. There is also a player stats menu. This stats menu will allow you to set things like, how much armor you have, how many tanks you have won. It is also used to set the difficulty of the current game mode. If you are playing a fort mode the difficulty will be set to Fort, if you are playing an attack or defense on a map it will be set to Standard. When the map is set to Standard the game is harder than on fort mode. This will only be a factor if you take

Schedule Steelers Minor League Batterup By David Bucci

July 13, 2004 Over the last ten years, the Liverpool (UK) Indians have fielded some pretty formidable teams, but back in the mid-1990s, they were no match for the Philadelphia Phillies Minor League Batterup. In 1995, the Indians went 72-63 and captured the International League West Division title. That team was a virtual clone of the current team as well, apart from #2 who batted right-handed and #5 who caught, and a few new faces like bench-clearer Trent Galvin, Eric Byrnes and Jamie Burton. They lost the International League Finals (7 games) to the defending A.L.C.S. champions, the Toronto Blue Jays, the Semifinals of the A.L.C.S. 1998 (also 7) and the 2000 A.L.C.S. (2 games). The 1995 team was led by Joe Pepitone (.314 avg., 31 HR) and Mike Minter (.324, 16 HR, 65 RBI). The quintet included lefties Brett Tomko, Matt Cerone (12-9, 2.18 ERA) and Boone Knith. Notable regulars with the Indians were Darren Dreifort (.262, 8-12, 3.12 ERA), Boris Pense (1.81, 8-3, 3.09 ERA) and Doug Delmonico (.269, 6-1, 2.59, 2 HR, 24 RBI). The team's best Minor League season in history came in 1998 when they went 82-64 at Two Rivers Field. Included in the Indians' back-to-back M.L. West championships were Port St. Lucie's Tyler Walker (Atlanta Braves), Orlando's Tony Paskett (Oakland Athletics), Lancaster's Brad Stevens and San Jose's Urias. The Indians' ballpark is praised worldwide for its climate and spectacular sightlines, and deservedly so. Located in the hills of Liverpool, and having opened in 1934, the ballpark has been the home of the minor league Batterups since the team's inception in the late 1970s. The Electric Range (above left) on an expansive tree-top hillside, which looms directly over the infield, creates a very comfortable watch-the-ball field,
